FEBRUARY

RESPONSIBILITIES

February is a month of famous birthdays. These include the birthdays of our First Countryman, George Washington; and the Great Emancipator, Abraham Lincoln. Although those two are perhaps the foremost in our minds, February also includes the birthdays of Charles Dickens, Thomas A. Edison, Longfellow, and Lindbergh.

Take each of these separately and consider the qualities of the men. Forget what they have done and compare some of the qualities of their characters with your own. Do you have the honor and truthfulness of Washington? You do not have to be president to be honorable and truthful. As long as you have these your financial status isn't so important. Anyone who is truthful and honest is a success, although he is not always recognized as such by the world.

Do you have the gentleness and humbleness of Lincoln? These weren't just surface qualities. They went deep into his very soul and formed the background of his career.

Do you have the nobleness and courage of Lindbergh? Perhaps, you have no desire to fly, but even on solid ground, courage and nobleness will greatly improve your existence.

Few people have the literary ability of Dickens, the inventive genius of Edison, or the poetry of Longfellow. They are to be admired and respected for these talents as well as for the strong characteristics mentioned above.

Just think what a happier world this would be if our lives were patterned just a little after that of these great men. We can't expect to be perfect, but just a few of these qualities would change our lives into something richer and more beautiful.

In the schools of today the chief objective is to prepare the young citizen to face his full responsibilities and take his place in society. With such an aim, it seems proper that the students should be given some responsibility in the management of school affairs.

Neither the students nor the teachers should expect to dictate, but the students should be allowed to cooperate with the teachers in carrying out the policies of the school. With the cooperation of the students and teachers, there are no limits to the achievements of a school. With the help of their teachers and of other adults, students are capable of many things for which they are not credited.

Today's students are tomorrow's citizens. There is a large gap between the senior's life today and his life tomorrow. The school should do something to bridge this gap. If a person is made responsible for his actions in high school, he will make a more useful citizen tomorrow.

However, this statement should be made with reservations. Along with this privilege of making their own decisions must come a certain responsibility. When they are no longer worthy of these privileges, then is the time to take away their privileges.

High school students aren't sheep, and can't be driven like sheep. Perhaps they follow the same styles in dress and slang; but in the larger problems, they make their own decisions and should be allowed to follow them. The characters of students of this age are rather thoroughly developed.

If the present students live a democracy in their school life, they can take their place in a larger democracy as good citizens.

NINE LESSONS IN LIVING

Learn to laugh. A good laugh is better than medicine.

Learn to attend strictly to your own business.

Learn to tell a story. A well told story is as welcome as a sun-beam in a sick room.

Learn the art of saying kind and encouraging things.

Learn to avoid all ill-natured remarks and everything calculated to create friction.

Learn to keep your troubles to yourself. The world is too busy to care for your ills and sorrows.

Learn to stop grumbling. If you cannot see any good in the world, keep the bad to yourself.

Learn to hide your aches and pains under a pleasant smile. No one cares whether you have the ear-ache, headache, or rheumatism.

Learn to greet your friends with a smile. They carry too many frowns in their own hearts to be bothered.

There has been some doubt about how to read the clock above the score board in the gym. There is a large minute hand that makes one revolution each quarter. There is another smaller hand that moves only a quarter of the way around the clock each quarter. The small hand should be pointing down and the big hand up at the half. Both hands should be up at the end of the game.

GRADES

I think that I shall never see,

A grade much higher than a "D".

A "D" whose ugly form is spread

Across my card in glowing red

A "D" that means but this to me,

Another trip across papa's knee.

"D's" are made by fools they say

But who in the heck can make an "A"?

THERE ARE A FEW THINGS

I'll never get over my cold. I hate to see my report card. But on the other hand, I love Physics. I don't want to hear anymore about Civics. I don't see how we lived without automobiles. Nothing will ever replace youth.

Lloyd Smith

I'll never get over Saturday night January 18, 1941. I hate to see Zionsville win the tourney. But on the other hand, I love basketball. I don't want to hear anymore about Whitestown not winning the tourney. I don't see how we lived without horses. Nothing bores me more than gossip. Nothing will ever replace automobiles.

Loren Dodson

I'll never get over my lessons. I hate to see Monday come. But on the other hand, I love Saturday and Sunday. I don't want to hear anymore about Physics. I don't see how we lived without airplanes. Nothing will ever replace vacation time.

Clestine Newman

I'll never get over losing the tourney. I hate to see Zionsville win the trophy every year. But on the other hand, I love good sportsmanship. I don't want to hear any more about Latin. I don't see how we lived without jitterbugs. Nothing bores me more than being bossed. Nothing will ever replace the telephone. (Juniors)

SOME HAND?

Last night I held a little hand,
So dainty and so neat,
I thought my heart would surely
burst,
So wildly did it beat;
No other hand that I held so
tight,
Could greater happiness bring,
Than the hand I held last night
'Twas four aces and a king.

"Is this dance formal, or can I wear my own clothes?"

"So you were graduated from a barber college. What is your college yell?"

"Cut his lip, cut his jaw-leave his lip raw, raw, raw!"

Answer to last month's Who's Who.
